SC orders ex-AFP officers, kin out of disputed land

By Armand H. Mazon

THE SUPREME COURT HAS RULED THAT RETIRED military and police officers and their families should vacate a disputed 398,602-sq.-in. property in Fort Bonifacio, saying that its occupants may have been hoodwinked by "a cabal of cheats" in the government's land management office.

"This could not have come to pass without the participation of a cabal of cheats to make a dishonest look at the expense of the government and most likely the members of SHAI (Statewide Homeowners Association Inc.)," the Supreme Court said.

In ending the 15-year dispute over the prime property inside the 36-39-he. Joint State Military Advisory Group (Jusmag) compound, the high court also ended the military leadership for ordering eviction operations despite the fact that the tribunal had yet to rule on the matter.

The 24-page ruling, issued by the high court's second division and written by Associate Justice Carlos C. Garcia, included a scolding for Attilio Bernal, Chief of Staff Gen. Hermogenes Erap and his subordinates "that might not be always right, but ours is still a government of laws and not of men, be they in the civil or military sector."

The tribunal said it would "not take lightly any attempt to wriggle, intimidate or subvert, with its processes and proceedings."

The forced eviction was marked by sweeping and plain from the families that they be allowed to stay as well as outright evictions.

The ruling was an setback of the evictions charges filed by retired military generals Raymond Jingo, Mariano Bagan, President Milena and Juanita Mula and Col. Demetrio P. Amador following the eviction of their colleagues from the Jusmag compound earlier this year.

Jingo, a former Army brigadier general, Melchor Rosales, a former Air Force general and now senator undersecretary, and Benjamin Delosno, a former AFP chief of staff and now ambassador at large for counterterrorism, were among those who had manually approved their evictions.

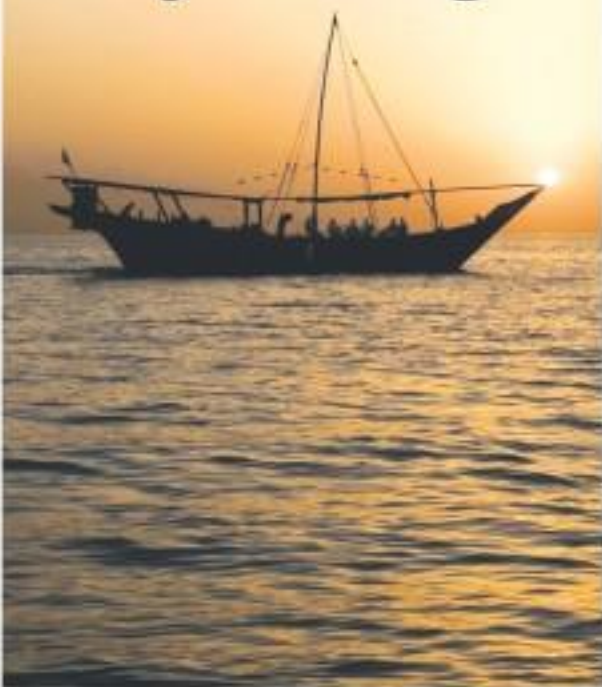

Under military housing regulations, the families of officers who have retired, resigned or died have to leave their official quarters within 60 days.

But BSNL, composed of retired wives, claimed to have bought the property for P11.5 million.

With its ruling, the Supreme Court "reversed and set aside" a decision of the Court of Appeals upholding BSNL's ownership of the property.

Senate asks SC to junk Cha-cha bid

By Joliet Labog-Josellano

THE SENATE HAS ORDERED THE SUPREME Court to throw out a petition to overhaul the country's 19-year-old Constitution through a people's initiative, saying it was a dangerous political maneuver that could lead to anarchy.

The petition also falsely invoked the name of God and was "manipulated by the administration," the Senate said in a position paper it filed with the high court that reflected the senators' vigorous opposition to the Malacañang-backed attempt to rewrite the Charter.

The court has scheduled oral arguments for Monday on what the justices have described as a "very important case."

The Charter change petition seeks to dump the country's presidential form of government and install in its place a parliamentary system while keeping President Macapagal-Arroyo and Vice President Noli de Castro in their posts until 2010.

It was filed by the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines—composed of governors, mayors and other local officials—as citizens-partners, the Sigayay Bagan.

Filipinos' per capita income to reach $1,463

By Gil C. Calanog Jr.

THE MAY BE THE LEAST POPULAR of the country's presidents, but the fortunes of Filipinos probably had never been better than under President Macapagal-Arroyo.

According to government and private economists, Philippine per capita income—or the share of each citizen in the country's wealth as measured by gross domestic product (GDP)—is estimated to reach more than $1,460 this year.

According to Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Ramelo Neri, this was the best per capita income level that the country has attained in the postwar era, much higher than the industrial boom years of the Marcos dictatorship and the hell run under the Ramos presidency.

Atty. Rep. Joey Salveda cited a Citibank report last month which placed Philippine per capita income at $1,380.

Salveda said the US-based bank had highlighted the most improvement in the country's per capita income, the best since the 1970s, it said.

Salveda, an economic adviser to the President, said 22 consecutive quarters

Filipinos' per capita income to hit past $1,463 of GDP, population growth of below 3 percent were the factors that lifted the country's per capita income.

Based on the government's economic growth forecast, Salazar said the Philippines would hit a per capita income of $1,463 per Filipino by the end of 2008 based on a GDP of $6.7 billion, population of 87.4 million and average peso dollar exchange rate of 72.4.

In addition to changes in price, the National Bureau of Statistics said the country's per capita income rose from $1,463 per capita income in 2007 to $1,463 per capita income in 2008.

At this time, Salazar said the Philippines could hit a minimum of $1,400 per capita income by 2010.

Match Thailand's performance

"Our fighting spirit is a per capita of $1,400 which would put us on a par with Thailand," which had a per capita of $1,400 in 2007, he said.

Matching Thailand's performance was "healthy strategical," Salazar said.

Thailand and the Philippines used to be economic rivals until Bangkok's economy crashed in the 1990s while that of the Philippines followed.

Salazar said the surge in per capita income over the past 3 years was not even remarkable considering that the government moved from a low base (about $500 per capita during the EDSA administration) and the volatile political situation that has kept the economy virtually on the verge throughout his rule.

Salazar said the per capita income should increase from $1,400 per capita to $1,400 in the current average of below $100 for the rest of the year.

GDP renaissance

Salazar said that if per capita were calculated based on gross national product (GNP)—which he believes would be the per capita would be even higher because of the unprecedented rise of contributions from overseas Filipino workers in recent years.

GDP measures the total monetary value of all the goods and services produced in a country in a given year, minus receipts from abroad.

But equally important is building per capita income, meaning that the country's wealth is shared by all, according to him.

"This is the reason why the focus of our economic development in the coming years is strengthening the backbone that prevents the economic gains from filtering down to the masses," he said.

The inclusive higher capital expenditures to build more colleges, airports, bridges and agriculture facilities while directing more funds to social services and out through the government's pushback through the efficient distribution of national funds, health and health insurance.

But as he himself noted, the uneven distribution of this national wealth remained a big problem for the government.

"We might have a high per capita income, but whether this is distributed equally is a big question," he said.

While the President has noted the strong peso, low interest rates and the improving fiscal condition as proof of her good economic stewardship, he said he has dismissed those as headline statistics that do not reflect the widespread poverty in the country.

Homeless people

learn to hope in Manila shelter

NGO's mission is to teach the poor that there is life beyond the streets

By Margaret C. Ortiz

LIKE A BOMB OUT OF A HOT TELEVISION show, 18 people stay inside cramped homes for 30 days, with the hope of leaving a better life as soon as they step out into the real world.

But instead of competing for a million bucks, these people—of all ages—live on the streets, with especially those who endure a new kind of life: from their initial rehab facility, they move to a shelter.

"The homeless have a different kind of addiction compared to alcohol and drug addicts," Almas said the location.

He is the founder of the GIMME SHELTER Movement Inc., a nongovernmental organization that runs a "youth shelter" for people who live on the streets.

Instead of withdrawing to drug substances, as most drug users are prone to do, the homeless are "addicted" to a life on the streets, Almas explained.

"Stoned out of his mind," Almas said, "the homeless are in a state of mind that makes them feel that they are not alone, but that they are not alone."

Because they also lack in self-esteem, they become afraid to apply for jobs and merely wander about on the streets, waiting for "bitchin'" people to give them food.

Untapped potential

Almas said he realized the hidden potential of the homeless while working as a young man in Metro Manila's poor communities of inner-city slums.

While talking to some people who lived on the streets, Almas said, he learned that the drug environment and atmosphere of homelessness had convinced to Almas that they were not alone, but that they were not alone.

"It was then that I felt that I had to do something to help these people help themselves," Almas said.

After years of studying the streets, he found a shelter in the heart of Manila. In April 1995, he gathered 18 homeless individuals—a couple, two men and a group of women—for his shelter project.

"They looked interested at first, saying that they did not know anything was going on about them," Almas said.

The group was disappointed at first but eventually agreed to join the shelter project, Almas said. He said, adding that the homeless individuals had no home to return to, Manila is a shelter.

In the game

According to his grandmother, Almas said, he learned that the homeless individuals were not alone, but that they were not alone.

"I want it to be in the family," Almas said with a smile as he recalled his grandmother's efforts to help him.

By her words, Almas taught the group that the homeless individuals had no home to return to, Manila is a shelter.

"It was then that I felt that I had to do something to help these people help themselves," Almas said.

The Shomvi have not been assimilated to the Swahili but, instead, have remained distinct. A large, growing tribe, the Shomvi are the largest group of the area. On the far northern part of the island, the Shomvi live in the mountains and are the most primitive of the islanders. They are a mix of both Swahili and Arab blood.

Transforming plastic junk into works of art

By Della T. Muller Jr.
Assistant Business Editor

LICHTENSTADT—WANTING TO HAVE AN additional reason to support his wife and 2-year-old daughter, Michael James, 23, got his creative juices flowing and started transforming plastic junk into simple but inspiring works of art.

From sets of empty plastic bottles of 1.5, 2 and 3-liter sizes, James made a variety of different models of miniature trees and flower plants with the use of clay, paint of various and good-looking disposable kites.

He started his craft last January after he finished school. James, raised mostly on his own, had a hard time in school in the past, but he was interested in the arts.

When James moved to Litchfield after school, he was who left on his own, but in a way of looking at himself, he took it as a challenge and further improved on what he learned from his parents.

"When several people and others, I saw other people's work and I was proud of it," James proudly says.

He says he started looking at the trees and plants in his surroundings as a way to cope.

With painted pictures in hand, the artist began to use his imagination and began to use his imagination to create a world of his own. He started using empty plastic bottles and turned them into miniature trees and plants on the side of the bottle and a 3-liter bottle to be used.

One day two inches above the base, he ran a spiral marker up to the top of the bottle using the lead provided by the bottle. He then the disposable kites to make a flower. This led to the first design, a flower-like branch of the tree, a cat for the second and to add some more light to the tree.

With his skilled fingers, James even created a bird figure perched on one of the branches of the 3-liter plastic bottle.

James says he would think a minimum of 20 minutes a day.

"I use one colored plastic bottle of 1.5-liter per drink. The figure looks dull if I use colorful containers. I also use to transform the yellow plastic bottle of a popular green can beverage," he says.

His job, Michael James, 23, has a simple plan to build his own plastic and more at $1 per piece.

According to James, his main reason for creating these "works of art" is to make a statement. He says that the main reason for the plastic plant is to make a statement. He says that the main reason for the plastic plant is to make a statement.

The event is part of the celebration of the National Family Week this year. President Fidel V. Ramos' Presidential Proclamation No. 80, signed in 1993, set aside the last week of September as National Family Week.

The fair will include displays, on-site information on searching surveillance records, and tutorials on online searching. Family histories and artwork depict the family men who served the nation.

Bullens, Coptic of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said the church wanted to share its vast experience and resources to those interested in researching their ancestry. He said it was also an opportunity for people to learn how much value the church and can be family.

Today it owns the world's largest collection of genealogical records with over three million rolls of microfilm containing billions of names, over 700,000 microfiche and more than 275,000 books and several unique family history libraries.

In the Philippines, almost 70 percent of available vital records have been microfilmed. Some 150 Family History Service Centers nationwide offer free service to the community.

The main center is in Germantown, QC. Visitors can do research on their ancestors using microfilmed (Shippens and records, some dating as early as the 1500s. Well-indexed volumes are available to answer questions and help people in their search. Call 1-800-115-3741 toll-free.

Window shopping

BEFORE YOU THINK THAT ALL GLASS windows are alike, check out Andersen's "tilt down and close" high-performance Low-E4 Glass with viewing windows.

Low-E4 glass windows feature an innovative exterior staining, thus, when activated by sun light, helps reduce the building and energy costs up to 50 percent. Its non-reflective variable Low-E4 glass with viewing windows, which are applied to one of the glass surfaces, allows natural light and its visible light. The glass coatings can also reduce glare and cut ultraviolet light, reducing the potential for fading of interior fabrics and furnishings.

Andersen Low-E4 glass also features energy-saving technology to help reduce heating bills, and to maintain vibrant energy performance. But behind the scenes, however, this is the best part about living in a home with low-E4 glass windows. They are easy to drive.

A drive protocol film is applied to the interior and exterior sides of the glass during manufacturing to provide additional protection against shattering and installation towards as well as to maintain the film. It is easily removed and helps reduce glare up to 50 percent.

The Andersen High Performance Low-E4 glass is available in Andersen Windows and Doors, and will be a standard feature on Andersen's 100th Anniversary.

LIFESTYLE STORES OUR HOME AND A NEW store on The Block in Old City Plaza takes the space to rethink with features and home furnishings for students and professionals who are starting out on their own, or those who want to decorate their place in style.

The good news is that there are, as they say, style solutions to limited budgets and space, which are usually in a bad lot. There are some tips from the store:

- It's always a better idea when you're looking for a home to visit a place that's probably the most functional piece of furniture for a college student or young professional living in a small space. When it comes to your bed, the sofa is up, converting the living room to a bedroom. A head bed is another option.
- Create your own closet space in the den with plenty of shelves from the store. It's a fun and comfortable way for teens to grow up and get away from home. When it's all over, the shelves can be put up in a corner of the room or used to decorate a bed.

THINK your furniture just isn't doing it? Incorporate modern storage space that is looking down on you.

We've got it all for you!

- Create furniture with attitude: A modern, clean table that can be used for eating, studying, or even a low table for games, and a modern chair can be easily tucked under a modern table. Long chairs and ottomans that have solid frames and storage space in the end will be a hit in the store. These pieces have a way of getting around space.
- Pick items that are clean and bright, giving that pop and shape that are great for your living room.
- Modern candles are not only made of glass, but also have interesting colors. Baskets in a variety of colors can keep your room looking like a modern design. Former 'ST Queen' is making sure her daughter gets to watch her comeback movies

By Rapun San Diego Jr.

IN ALL HONESTNESS, COME-backing star Grendon Barretto looked that she had asked permission not only from partner Iroy Iroy Cojuangco, but also from their 11-year-old daughter Dominique before accepting her career film and television.

"I don't do anything without her approval. I wanted to avoid problems," she said before her return to the screen in an interview held on the first shooting day of her latest film, "Makita sa mga Kama," which is set to be the year's most anticipated movie.

"Greta" is one of Barretto's two "comeback" movies—the other is the legal drama, currently tentatively titled "Dependable," co-starring Ruffa Gutierrez, Gino Guinto and Ruffa Gutierrez.

"The former movie is something Dominique can watch. It's something she can relate to, but because it's a historical movie, when my manager Roy Alameda told me that it was for the MTRC, I knew that it would be a bit of a challenge while he was," she explained. "I was younger viewers to get so much so. Let's face it, my old movies were for adults. I was once known as an ST Queen, remember?"

Not going wild

Before shooting "Makita sa mga Kama," she was billed as the "Sex ST Queen" in various video films produced by Imelda Film.

But that's a thing of the past, she said. "That's why I'm asking myself on the day of 'Dependable.' It's kind of a cross between 'Sex' and the STQ and 'Dependable' because in the movie's premiere night, I don't want my daughter to get embarrassed on TV, right?"

She continued, "I'm only playing my cards right. I don't want them to think of me that I'm going wild just because they allowed me."

Two more graded 'B'

By Maribel R. Cruz

THE CRISP, CRISP "MAGNETIC DANCING" and Michael Douglas' "Blind by Day" were graded "B" by the Cinema Evaluation Board (CEB), citing "strong direction and well-written script," as reasons for the decision.

The "B" grade results a movie in a 40 percent cut when, and CEB Chair Christine Reyes.

"Change handled a very rich material with direction and editing," Reyes said of the film on male prostitution written by Ricky Lee. "For a gay movie, it's very open to accept the good deeper than that trade to selling sex in a social sense."

Reyes said "Magnetic Dancing" would have gotten a higher grade were it not for its same-sex theme, which "some board members found a little too graphic." But she and the board was "amused" in pointing the professionals of actress Cherry Pie Picache and Imelda Cruz.

Releasable

"Magnetic Dancing," which premiered in the recently concluded Metro International Film Festival, also features Tonya Peres, Kim Martinez and Lianne Lirio.

"Blind by Day," the semi-biographical movie of rock band The Eraser, impressed the board with its "strong" musical scoring and "believable" characters and story.

"The film's style and approach in storytelling is also different and interesting. It's not, however," the CEB chief added, "Nancy Pung (Blindness) and Mylene (Blind) are equally outstanding."

Reyes added: "The a Pung rock film, 'Blind by Day' is a tribute to the industry."

"Blind by Day," which follows the lives of the members of The Eraser in the late 20s, was directed by Pung in the conclusion of the 2nd Cinemalaya Philippine Independent Film Festival in July. It also tagged the Best Directed and Best Screenplay awards.

Salamat sa Smart IDD, sinuwerte rin sa wakas!

Genela Samco is a mother of four and wife to an Overseas Filipino Worker (OFW).

Like most women married to OFWs, the responsibility of raising the children and taking care of the household has fallen on Genela's shoulders, ever since her husband, Tirso, left for work abroad in 1986.

"Sa tolong linggwa na nito ko kagaya lang," she says, smiling to her husband of 20 years. "Then knowing kagaya kagaya it's okay na ulit," she adds.

"Bati na lang may Smart Pinoyang nag-iintake ko sa mga kausapang ang mga anak namin pag hindi na nasa bahay nang buhat nandun ang tawag ng Magandang maging mag-iintake sa 'ito na pag-iintake ko na kagaya bati," she adds.

Genela swears that Smart IDD calls have become an integral part of her family life. All of her sons and even the one who just left for Kuwait are all loyal Smart subscribers.

Despite the difficulties and the worries posed by the physical separation from her husband, Genela counts her blessings. "Gento kami kasi mababalat ang mga anak namin... Sa isa ang mga Olyos, wala namang mag-iintake na problema. Sa pareng kagaya," she says.

Every now and then, Genela pins text promos on television and the daily broadsheets because "bake sa kagaya sa kagaya."

When she did win a brand new jeepney in Smart's Pangatubuhayan Promo, she could hardly believe her luck. "Sa wakas, sinuwerte rin! Hang hang ko lang sa Smart, nanat na! Mawaring mawaring salamat sa Smart!" she exclaims.

Young Genela is her brand new Smart Pangatubuhayan jeepney.

The Samcos are lucky recipients of the Smart Pangatubuhayan Promo. This livelihood program of Smart allows all hardworking Filipinos a chance to become entrepreneurs and secure the fruits of their labor.

Now, Tirso can't wait to visit home and share the joys of his wife. "Mawaring mawaring salamat sa Smart! Bati nga ng mawaring sa."

Genela now dreams of going on a family vacation once they have saved enough from their modest source of income. "Dagdag income kagaya yan para sa anak, kagaya makakapang na kagaya ng kagaya. Mawaring mawaring salamat sa Smart!"

'Elizabeth': Royal pains & pleasures

By Oliver H. Palombi
Contributor

THIS IMPERIOUS MESSAGE "Elizabeth I" provides a thorough and layered chronicle of the reign of England's famed "Virgin Queen," whose devastating government was marked with bold new ventures and, apparently, personal setbacks.

What we don't see in history books is the daily routine: getting to her very busy work—her private thoughts, faith, vision, and, surprisingly, her very sense of humor.

REVIEW

Queen Elizabeth I, as the revealing period perspective suggests, governed her land as effectively as she could, for some decisions often took a toll on her well-being.

The venerable Helen Mirren splendidly played and humanized the historical figure, who was portrayed, as a result, more during her rule, with shocking scenes that would help produce a better to continue her family's royal lineage, the clearly necessary to her (and her) from the same that she has to do so without to lose a child, but still to their order after much deliberation, injury.

Conspirators

Choosing the proper man, however, is a difficult task. It is not one of the challenges that the beleaguered queen must face, while brain that, she has to meet her conspirators who threaten the throne, while keeping as far as the consequences of an ultimately fatal betrayal with confidence Robert Dudley (the Earl of Leicester) (Henry VIII).

The two-center game was her development at court during a few distinct periods of personal turmoil, as well as her growth into a ruler that became with, and leads the nation in several successful conflicts against neighboring territories. She knows her politics well and is keenly aware of the power she wields, although there are instances where some judgments are considered rash by her occasionally pointed advisors, including the loyal Lord Burghley (Sir William Cecil, the Elder), nevertheless, it is often over her more personally charged decisions, especially on matters that forced Dudley's return, the harsh, handsome Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex (Hugh Dancy).

Requiem

"Elizabeth I" re-creates a magnificent atmosphere of the English era, albeit with some narrative embellishments that compromise the historical backbone of the queen's story. Set mostly in the late 1500s, the culturally alien era may of England have a royal hand in shaping Elizabeth, so much so the does in shaping them in the realm of religious faith and economic upheaval.

Directed by Jane Fien and written with an eye for strong characterization by Hilary Mantel, "Elizabeth I" dances the powerful woman's mother and political brother, and to some degree, her unrelentingly pushed away of emotional openness.

We are capturing that Mirren gives her an equally strong presence and voice, and also, making palpable beyond the jewel-encrusted coronas and outlandish headpieces. The aging queen is written as important but approachable, but she can be intimidating and capable of vicious retribution when spurned.

Age-inspiring

Still, she brings her occasional wailing and occasional love life confined to the more restricted scenes of her palace. She's an intelligent and awe-inspiring politician, as the journeying off to the island of the during its winter campaign, to bring and direct speak with her people. "I know I have the body but of a weak and feeble woman," she tells her ally, "but I have the heart and stomach of a king; that of a king of England, and."

"Elizabeth I" promises insight at 9 on the National Channel.

GMA Films announces film project with Mega

By Neil Veloso

A FANTASY MOVIE STARRING CRANK! Come to the next project of GMA Films, according to the filmmaker's producer, Steven Abregu. In an exclusive interview with Inquirer Entertainment last week, Abregu said GMA was also interested in co-producing ventures with CMA Films.

"We don't have anything signed yet," Abregu admitted. "But we've seen this deal would push through, knowing Abregu."

The actress, who has been debuting in movie to produce films locally, has embarked on similar ventures with United Pictures, the focus of which is "Las Vegas," starring Robin Padilla.

Abregu said GMA's first movie with CMA Films would be about a 12-13 high definition feature.

"We're doing this for the special in here," Abregu said. "It's better movie only for a lot of special effects."

She said shooting might start in October.

Mega says

In a true message to business, Dave Robinson, the co-owner and chief executive officer of the company, said, "I would be able to work with CMA Films," Abregu said. She said she is about to start with Abregu as the CEO and decide if she likes it... and then "We may suddenly see all which schedule."
